

CHAPTER 4

CONCLUSIONS AND SUGGESTIONS

4.1 Conclusions

Based on the analysis above, the writer knows that Janie has strong motive to become a singer. She gets internal and external stimulus that make her strong. Internal stimulus is inherited from her late father. She got talent to sing from her biological father. External stimulus has correlation with her relationship and Harmon in a foster home Patsy and Pete. First time Janie listened to music by Harmon cassette and went to church. The internal and external stimulus make Janie desire to be a singer.

To achieve the desire to be a singer she has passed through obstacles. The obstacle comes from internal and external. Internal obstacle has correlation with Sigmund Freud about Id, Ego and Superego theory, the writer can see internal obstacle in her attitude, her behavior and her personality. Negative attitude, behavior and personality of Janie that make some people don't like Janie. Besides, environment and relationship that make Janie know criminal world and bad relationship make her pregnant. External obstacle can make influences of Janie desire to be a singer. Janie obstacles that make the desire to be a singer delayed.

Although, the desire to be a singer is delayed, Janie has high spirit in her life. Her condition makes Janie change environment and relationship. She lives with Joy as social worker when she is pregnant. Janie has studied to Joy how to take care of baby. Then she lives with Rosalie Brown family, Janie begin school again and begin arrange her life. The desire to be a singer appears again after that she can overcome the obstacle. She meets with music producer and composer and her desire to be a singer can realization. Paul helped Janie to study about music more detail. Good environment and relationship that make Janie more adult and successful Janie to realize the desire to be a singer. As a conclusion from this novel, the writer takes lesson spirit, effort, and hard work that make someone successful.
