

CHAPTER IV

CONCLUSION

This chapter contains of the result based on the discussion in the previous chapters. There are two parts that was discussed in this study. The first is about characterization of Beatrice as main character of the novel. The second is about Beatrice action to against inhumanity.

The first part is about the characterization of Beatrice, the researcher tries to analyze characterization of Beatrice as the main character based on Holman Theory as the basic description about the character. The result of discussion shows that Beatrice is small girl but she is strong. She is strong-wild and prove to be able to pass dangerous. She is strong and resilient woman. She is smart and the brave. She is not only the brave but also cunning. She is good person who care and help others. She is care and helps everyone. She never hesitates to help others. She was willing herself to sacrifice his life to save others.

The second part of this discussion is about the action of Beatrice against inhumanity. The researcher tries to analyze based on personality structure by Freud. The personality structure consist three basic concepts. They are id, ego and superego. The id of Beatrice is the desire to save their citizen from inhumanity life. The ego of Beatrice is she manages the strategy to against inhumanity. And the last, superego of Beatrice is she thinks about family value , humanity value, she can classifying the good and bad. Because superego is a child's moral barometer, and it creates feelings of pride and guilt according to the beliefs that have been learned within the family and the culture.

From the result above the writer can concludes that the character of Beatrice influenced what Beatrice does in her action against inhumanity.
