

CHAPTER IV

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

I. CONCLUSION

After analyzing the novel, the researcher concludes that human actually has a close relationship with the environment. Human is a part of ecosystem in which environment include inside it. Absolutely, that relationship affects each other. In the development, humans tend to be destructive to the environment and bring damage to the environment.

Reflecting to the data analysis, the conclusion is firstly shaped to the relationship between the main character, Hugh Glass, and the environment or the nonhuman world. He tends to be indifferent with the environment. He believes that nature can provide what he needs and he keeps hunting and cutting the trees to support his life and his group's life. He damages the environment by shooting the animals and using it as his foods or his business with his company, Rocky Mountain Fur Company. It is pictured that the hunting stains the environment. Carcasses and some fell trees are scattered around the forest. There are also the buffalos' skins that are used as the boat by Glass and his fellows after Glass shoots down eleven buffalos with his rifle. However, there is no further deed that is expressed as protecting the environment. Thus, the relationship is disadvantageous.

Secondly, because of the relationship between Glass and the environment, there are some effects that appear in the book. The forest becomes stained because of the carcass and the other nonhuman living in the forest becomes imbalance. The population of the hunted animals is decreasing. Physically, Hugh Glass also gets the impact of the relationship. He gets attacked by the grizzly bear and injured badly until his life is almost over. Thus, it can be concluded that the effect on the nature and on the human's life is major impact. Therefore, the relationship between the main character and the environment is very disadvantageous to each other and imbalance, and the effect of the relationship is the damage to the environment and Hugh Glass.

II. SUGGESTION

Based on the conclusion above, there are some suggestions given by the researcher to the other researchers in order to do a better research in the future.

1. There are some environmental issues in the novel The Revenant: A Novel Of Revenge that come from the lack of understanding of the importance of the nature and environment that have not been explained in this thesis yet. Thus, the readers can establish a new analysis using the issues that have not been covered.
2. If the readers want to analyze further about nature writing or ecological texts using ecocriticism theory, the researcher suggests the readers to find any texts—novels, short stories, or poems—which assumed to have environmental issues on it. The analyses must understand both the theory and the text.
