

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

In this chapter, there are descriptions of how the research is summarized. They are include summarizing the analysis and giving the researcher's suggestion viewing the problem

A. CONCLUSION

The conclusion that can be drawn toward the research question is that through the deep analysis of the research proposal background of the students of English Education Department in UIN Sunan Ampel Surabaya, the researcher found that the students' logical statement in their research proposal writing could be categorized as good. It can be seen from their ability in linking their ideas to be a whole proposal background, which is shown in the diagram of the relation structure in the RST analysis.

The relational propositions used mostly in their proposal background are Elaboration, Background and justify. That is because the purposes of the proposal background are; firstly to introduce the research problem and or theory to the reader, thus Elaboration and Background relation are important to guide the reader to understand better. The next is that in the proposal background the writers are intended to argue that the ideas they belief and or the problems they are going to do the research are important; therefore the writer used Justify relation to hold their argument for the reader.

B. SUGGESTION

Conducting this study about logical statement or coherence in the research proposal background, the researcher hopes that this research is quite useful to acknowledge students in writing a good research proposal background. By knowing the importance of coherence in their writing, they also could use the Rhetorical Structure Theory tool to exercise their ability in writing logically. The researcher expects that this study also gives some useful information to lectures in teaching writing especially in writing research proposal background.

Besides, this study can be useful as reference to do the next research dealing with this research topic. The researcher hopes that this result of this study can acknowledge the next researchers and also help them to extend this study. So there will be many research findings dealing with this topic which can be useful for someone who wants to study coherence in writing.

Meanwhile in doing this study is not an easy task. So there are some suggestions which can be useful for the next researcher:

- Based on the rich theories of writing and rhetoric, and the available materials that relate the two fields together, the researcher believe that further research into how the two fields related is needed.
- Rhetorical theory offers a unique set of terms that can help the study of writing. Using a rhetorical structure, further research could help explain the importance of coherence in writing
- The next researcher have to be careful and patience in doing an intensive reading.
- This study can be used as reference to extend the next research dealing with rhetorical Structure and coherence in writing.
