

CHAPTER IV

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

I. CONCLUSION

Ultimately the researcher comes to the final chapter after analyzing the novel. The researcher concludes that humans cannot be far from the choice, because the choice will always be there. The aim of a choice is to make a human being a better person and think better than before. Therefore man has the freedom to choose and be responsible for his chosen choice and the essence of Bilbo Baggins is to realize his own life based on his own choice.

Based on the data analysis, the first conclusion is made for the relation of the characterizations that help to find the existentialist aspect in the main character. The main character in The Hobbit novel is a hobbit, named Bilbo Baggins that has his own habits and uniqueness of his character. The character has 4 unique characterizations that help him to decide the choice. The first is that Bilbo is an honest man. With honesty he can choose to be honest to be safe from the Gollum who wants to eat him. The second is that Bilbo is a kind hearted hobbit. He chooses to join the journey because he wants to help his dwarfs friends when they are in trouble as he did that is to release his friend from prison. The third, Bilbo is wise. He chooses to give the arkenstone stone to the right to have it as a virtue for all. The fourth, Bilbo is a brave figure. His choice to dare to do what is ruled by Thorin because he was a cowardly hobbit before.

After knowing the fourth characterizations that help Bilbo decides his choice, then knows the option chosen by the main character. In the novel there are three important phases in the novel. The first is the phase where Bilbo has not traveled, Bilbo chooses to follow Gandalf's suggestion and becomes an adventurous hobbit although previously Bilbo did not want to follow the journey. The second phase is during the adventure. Bilbo has two options to help dwarf friends or not help his friends. In the novel Bilbo chooses to help his friends when they lost their ponies stolen by the trolls. Bilbo told by Thorin to know what happened in the forest. Furthermore, Bilbo chooses to rescue his friends who are in an elf dungeon to set them free. The third, Bilbo's phase after the journey has the main task in this phase Bilbo as a burglar to steal Thorin's arkenstone and enter into the mountain containing a pile of gold pieces guarded by a savage dragon and steal the arkenstone from the dragon.

After choosing his choice the main character will be responsible for the choice he chose in the three phases. The first, Bilbo phase before the adventure is Bilbo is responsible to ask what will happen and the risks that he faces when he follows the adventure. Secondly, during the adventure of Bilbo that does not want to disturb his friends while he waits for his friends, Bilbo tries to not waste his time to wait his friends but he try to take something from the pocket a trolls as being responsible in
