CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

5.1 Conclusion

The data analysis reveals that the short story entitled The child's story by Charles Dickens share about the journey of life in our life. It starts from childhood and spontaneous youth, through adulthood and marriages, and continue into our golden years. Based on data analysis, the writer discovers adjective word that use by the author which contains of connotative meaning and denotative meaning. The writer's found some categorizes of adjective such as adjective of color, physical adjective, and emotional adjectives. Adjective words which appear are modifiers that describe words which they relate by providing specific detail and do not have to agree in number or gender. The adjectives serve best empowering and disempowering the object character that represent the author's intentions. Adjectives words that appear also employed to create positive and negative depictions that help romanticize and dramatize event or even atmospheres in the story.

The writer finds 33 meaning of adjective words that appear in short story. The meanings of the adjective words that appear in short story either connotative meaning or denotative meaning. There are 21 connotation meaning and 12 denotation meaning. The Connotation meanings are beautiful, gold, silver, and happy. The denotation meanings are handsome, busy, merriest, and smooth. The meaning has written based on interpretation of the writer from reading the short story. The meaning of word is constituted by contextual relations. Moreover, the mostly adjective word that appears in this analysis is category of color. They are, blue, green, white, gold, silver, brown, yellow, grey, red, and purple. All of those words exist in any situations. It uses to help create positive and negative image. The adjective of color also used to portray the feeling of the character in story and depict the situation at the time. It makes the nuance and atmospheres in story more colorful

All of meanings and situations are interpreted based on the context in text. From the context in text the writer knows the meaning of adjective words that use in short story. Hence, context have important role to interpret words meaning in sentence. The same words might consist of different or even consist of two meaning when the context is different. In addition, the writer finds the adjective words context that appears in short story such as in journey, stranger, full of happiness, when the rain fall drops, in forest, snowy, imagination of childhood, play at the garden, appearance of the girls, and peaceful. The adjective words contexts that appear in short story is considered from the word relation that is constituted by other words and depends on the certain situation.

5.2 Suggestion

The writer suggest for the other researcher who wants to analyze the meaning of words can give more attention in the other types of meaning such as social meaning, affective meaning, reflected meaning, collocative meaning, and thematic meaning. This study can help the reader to understand more about the meaning of words and this study would be beneficial for those who want to conduct research in the same field.