ABSTRACT

Title : Analysis of Language Features in Barack Obama's Speech

Key words: Language Features, lexical features, grammatical features.

This study concerns to the analysis of language features in the Obama's speech. The study focus on how lexical features and grammatical features his process of language features. Hopefully, this study will be useful for the readers especially for students of English Department, to make them realize the process which every human passes, language features. The method of the study is descriptive qualitative because this study is to describe the process of language features in Obama speech. The data is taken from the text of Obama speech. The writer uses some theories about language features from Noam Chomsky, Aristotle and some supporting theories to conduct this study.

By this study, the writer finds that Obama's speech has lexical and grammatical features when she was to delivery. The main concern of the study is to find out how Obama's inauguration speech addresses the confidence of the new President to cope with the domestic problemd and renew the American rolein the world in terms of its lexical and grammatical features. Finally, the writer hope that this study can open the readers' mind to a thing that they really do acquire language features.