CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION

5. 1. Conclusion

After analyzing the data and classifying them based on the types, the reason, and the function of code switching and code mixing, the researcher intends to discuss the finding that have been investigated in this section to answer the research question. Based on the research finding, it is clear that the characters utterances show types, the reason, and the function of code switching and code mixing.

In addition, based on the analysis on Chapter IV, there are two types of code switching and code mixing. The conversation characters sometimes use code switching and code mixing. The researcher finds seven of the reason characters using code switching and code mixing. The characters use code switching and code mixing in speak English switch or mix to Indonesia because they want to show their ethnic identity, self emotion, declaring solidarity, asserting power, pride and status, being more competent, being more informative, and conveying the speaker's attitude to the listener.

Moreover, the function of the characters use code switching and code mixing is affective function. They speak with another one must understand what they speak about. So, the listener does not need to understand the word of utterance's the speaker, but the listener needs to get the affective message.

5.2. Suggestion

After conducting this research, the researcher recognizes that this research is still many weaknesses. For the next researcher who will research of code switching and code mixing analysis, it hopes to focus their research on deep analysis. Moreover, the researcher hopes also that people who are interested in sociolinguistics field are challenged to continue this research and write a better research.

The researcher suggests to the next researchers conduct similar thing of this study with more complete data and discussion. It expects that the result of this study is going to lead the next researcher who conducts the same topic of research as the reference or comparison that might be relevant to their researchers. Finally, the researcher hopes this research can give a beneficial contribution to people and reader especially to the researcher who will conduct a research with this research.
