

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION

Language is a tool that is used by human being to communicate each other. It holds important role for human's life to communicate and make interaction. In our daily life, usually young people have to speak politely to the older. But, if the people who have the same age, they are inclined to use impolite language to express their feeling, such as illness, unpleasant and anger. As we know, impolite words are called as taboo words.

Taboo words have relation with swear words. They are parts of taboo words, it means that not all taboo words used for swear. Swearing is the way someone uses obscene words orally to insult, to curse or even to offend something (someone or action), and also for emphasizing, when the person has strong emotion.

Based on the data gathered, there are only four types of swear words occur. They are obscenity, vulgarity, ephitets and scatology. Obscenity swear words are emotive words that are mostly purposed to show the speaker's negative emotions. In this research, the only obscenity swear word is "jancok" and the short version of it, "cok". Vulgarity swear words found in the data are quite various. The vulgarity swear words shown do not have to be strongly emotive, yet they show rudeness. In this research, the vulgarity swear words are nggapleki with the short version gaplek or guaplek, nggateli with the short version gatel or guatel, cangkem, and matek. Scatology deals with human's waste products and processes. There are two scatology swears found in the data, they are nelek and entut. Scatology swear words shown do not have to be strongly emotive, but they show the speaker's discomfort to the hearer. They also as a tool for the speaker to commentate the hearer's bad habit. Ephetets is the swear word related to animal term. The swear word jancok with the short version cok is the swear word that mostly occurs so many times in the conversations.

Based on the data analysis the writer finds out the functions of swear words used by the characters of animation films Grammar Suroboyo. She finds out four functions, they are expletive, abusive, humorous and auxiliary. Expletive swear words are the words which are uttered not to insult and not directed to anyone. Abusive swear words are the words used to insult the target. Abusive swear words need someone to be the target. Humorous swear words are playful and do not purposed to offend anyone. The last function is auxiliary. It can be attached to a very plain context of conversation. The speaker of this swear word seem to be accustomed to uttering this swear word, so he can automatically attach it to his every word in conversations.

Swear words occur in many circumstances and for a lot of purposes, it seems that no one feels harmed or offended. The swear words here are social swear words, where the words are not used to harm each others. Even though in some cases the swear words are purposed to express the speaker's emotions and to offend the target, but there is no one who is really angry and being angry. The speaker use the words to show that the speaker and the hearer come from the same ethnic and to show their closeness. Because there is no distance and power differences between them, they can use swear words without being aware of the effect of the utterance and being offended by the swear words which are uttered by someone else.
